Picture yourself spending two weeks in the Rocky Mountain region at the gorgeous, state-of-the-art University Center for the Arts at Colorado State University. Come and stretch yourself as a musician...while your teaching reaches new heights.

Thrive in a supportive, fun and collegial atmosphere. Most participants teach either part or full-time during the school year, gaining experience while working on their graduate degree.

Curriculum includes opportunities to participate in Special Topic Sessions, Student Solo Recital, and the unique Kodály for Kids Days, a hands-on teaching practicum with children.

Colorado Kodály Institute is proudly endorsed by the Organization of American Kodály Educators (OAKE)

The Colorado Kodály Institute is the annual residency portion of the Master of Music, Music Education Specialization, Kodály Option, an exclusive teaching, conducting, and musicianship degree program designed for elementary, secondary, and independent music educators, that combines an online curriculum with hands-on experience.

The institute includes applied sessions taught by prestigious pedagogues from around the country, introducing the philosophy and teachings of Hungarian music educator, Zoltán Kodály and emphasizing concepts like enjoyment as a motivating force in learning; singing as a foundation; importance of a sequential music curriculum; use of folk song, dance, game, and legend to teach musical concepts, and cultural heritage, and musical literacy.

Upon completion of this master’s degree program, students will have earned national Kodály music teaching certification.
