TRY ON TEACHING with the Middle School Outreach Ensemble at Colorado State University
JAN. 16 - APRIL 23, 2016

PROGRAM OVERVIEW: With the goal of training the highest quality music teachers amongst a community of learners, this program creates an environment where institutional knowledge relating to teaching practice, and content-specific expertise, is cultivated, developed, and applied at the secondary level.

Over a period of 11 weeks, a staff of teaching artists (CSU faculty, music education majors, and high school band students who are interested in exploring a career in music education) instruct local middle school students through large ensemble and sectional rehearsals. Oriented toward social justice through music-making, master teachers assist all teaching artists to design, implement, and teach all aspects of the program. The experience culminates in a formal concert for parents, friends, and community members given by the Middle School Outreach Ensemble (MSOE).

PURPOSE:
MSOE makes a positive impact on music teacher education by providing opportunities to experience authentic music teaching among a diverse mentorship community with the aim of cultivating an artistic mindset, commitment to teaching, and music teaching effectiveness.

With a social justice emphasis, MSOE provides arts education opportunities that develop an understanding of how the music-making process can be used as a tool to cultivate a mindset of global citizenship through representations of lived human experience.

PARTICIPANTS INCLUDE:
- 100 local middle school band students
- 12 high school students (novice teachers)
- Graduate music education majors (developing teachers)
- 25 undergraduate music education majors (apprentice teachers)
- Practicing public school teachers (master teachers)
- Retired teachers and local middle school teachers
- CSU Music Education and Composition faculty
